From: Haruka
To: Ben
Subject: Sunday's poster work

Hi Ben,
Thank you for volunteering with me for next month's Town Pet Adoption Fair! Ms. Mori from the animal shelter emailed me photographs and short profiles of eight rescue dogs and six cats that are looking for warm homes. Our job is to make easy-to-read introduction cards for each animal's cage.

I printed all fourteen photos at home yesterday, and I bought thick yellow and light-blue card paper at the stationery shop. Since you write very neat English and Japanese letters, could you write the animals' names and favorite toys on the cards while I cut and paste the photos?

Let's work at the big table on the second floor of the town library at 1:30 p.m. this Sunday. Please bring your black marker set! Tell me if that time is OK.

Best wishes,
Haruka

The Benchmark on Sunset Hill

Behind Oak Junior High School stands Sunset Hill, a gentle climb that takes about twenty-five minutes to reach the top. Although the view of the harbor from the summit is wonderful, few older residents climbed the trail because there was nowhere to sit and rest halfway up.

In October, Mr. Kudo, who teaches woodworking in technology class, asked his ninth-grade students what they wanted to leave behind as a graduation project. One student, Yui, remembered walking up Sunset Hill slowly with her grandmother in spring and wishing there had been a sturdy bench near the big cedar tree halfway along the path. When Yui shared this memory, the whole class voted to build two wooden benches for the hill.

First, the class got permission from the city parks office. A city engineer visited the school to explain how outdoor benches must withstand rain, snow, and strong sunlight. Following her advice, the students chose local cedar wood, smoothed every sharp corner with sandpaper so nobody would get splinters, and brushed waterproof oil onto each board three times.

In February, thirty students carried the parts up the trail together and assembled the benches beside the big cedar tree. On the back of each bench, they carved a small message: "Take your time and enjoy the breeze." On graduation morning in March, Yui climbed Sunset Hill with her grandmother, and they sat side by side watching ferryboats cross the shining harbor.

3C The Benchmark on Sunset Hill　設問 (26)〜(30)

(26) Why did few older residents climb Sunset Hill in the past?

1 It took more than four hours to reach the summit.

2 The view from the top was blocked by buildings.

3 There was no place to sit and rest halfway up the trail.

4 Only Oak Junior High students were allowed to enter.

(27) What gave Yui the idea to build benches for Sunset Hill?

1 Mr. Kudo ordered the class to copy a bench in a magazine.

2 She remembered wishing for a bench when climbing the hill with her grandmother.

3 The city parks office paid the school to make furniture.

4 She wanted a place to store her soccer equipment.

(28) Why did a city engineer visit Oak Junior High School?

1 To teach the students how outdoor benches can last in rain, snow, and sun.

2 To cut down the big cedar tree on the hill.

3 To drive a truck to the top of Sunset Hill.

4 To judge a singing contest before graduation.

(29) Why did the students rub every corner of the wood with sandpaper?

1 To make the benches lighter to carry.

2 To remove the carved message on the back.

3 Because they forgot to buy waterproof oil.

4 So people sitting on the benches would not get splinters.

(30) What did Yui and her grandmother do on graduation morning in March?

1 They planted thirty new cedar trees behind the gym.

2 They painted the school gate together.

3 They rode a ferryboat to another country.

4 They climbed the hill and sat on the new bench watching the harbor.
