Preparing for the Class Art Show

From: Leo
To: Nao
Subject: Next Friday's class art show

Hi Nao,
Our class art show is only a week away, and everyone is busy getting their work ready. I printed six close-up photographs of insects that I took in our school garden this spring. I have space for five of them on my board, plus one larger frame right beside the classroom door. I cannot decide whether to put the swallowtail butterfly or the red ladybug in that frame. Since you have a good eye for colors, could you look at both photos tomorrow morning?

Also, Ms. Honda asked me to bring three rolls of thick display paper from the art storage room to the hall after school tomorrow. They are too long for one person to carry safely down the stairs. Are you free for ten minutes after homeroom to help me carry them?

Talk to you tomorrow,
Leo

1 Take six new photographs in the school garden.

2 Help him choose which insect photo to place beside the door.

3 Buy a larger picture frame near the station.

4 Ask Ms. Honda for more space on the wall.

(24) Why does Leo need help carrying the rolls of display paper?

1 He hurt his leg during sports class.

2 The art storage room is locked after school.

3 They are too long to carry down the stairs alone.

4 There are more than twenty rolls to move.

(25) When does Leo hope Nao can help him move the paper?

1 Before morning classes begin.

2 During the lunch break.

3 Right after homeroom tomorrow.

4 On the morning of next Friday.

Recording How Beans Grow

In April, Class Three received permission to turn an unused strip of land beside the science room into a small learning garden. At first, several students complained that pulling weeds and carrying soil was tiring. Their science teacher, Mr. Aoki, suggested dividing the work into short ten-minute shifts before morning homeroom so nobody would feel overwhelmed.

On the first Monday of May, the students planted green bean seeds in four wooden boxes. At the beginning, some students watered the boxes twice a day because they thought more water would make the seeds grow faster. However, Mr. Aoki showed them that giving too much water could actually rot the seeds underground. The class made a simple chart to check the soil with their fingers before watering.

To keep the area tidy, the students also set up two recycling bins near the tap. Dry leaves and pulled weeds went into the brown bin to become compost, while empty plastic seedling pots were washed and placed in the blue bin so next year's class could reuse them.

Two weeks later, the first bright green shoots pushed through the soil. Every Friday afternoon, students sketched the plants and measured their height with rulers. Several students who rarely spoke in science lessons became enthusiastic about comparing their weekly drawings.

In June, the Town Picture Gallery invited local schools to display student projects. Class Three selected twelve detailed plant sketches along with a short explanation of their watering chart. The students hope visitors will see that even a narrow corner of a schoolyard can become a place for discovery.

Recording How Beans Grow — Questions

(26) How did Mr. Aoki solve the students' first complaint?

1 He hired professional gardeners to carry the soil.

2 He organized short ten-minute work shifts in the morning.

3 He moved the garden inside the science room.

4 He decided not to plant any seeds until autumn.

(27) What mistake did some students make at first after planting the seeds?

1 They forgot to water the boxes for two weeks.

2 They watered the boxes too often without checking the soil.

3 They planted the seeds in plastic bags instead of wooden boxes.

4 They placed the wooden boxes in a dark room.

(28) Why were empty plastic pots put into the blue bin?

1 So they could be sold at the town gallery.

2 So they could be burned after school.

3 So another class could use them again the following year.

4 So they would turn into compost with dry leaves.

(29) What did the students do every Friday afternoon?

1 They drew pictures of the bean plants and measured their height.

2 They cooked green bean soup in the science room.

3 They visited the Town Picture Gallery by bus.

4 They bought new rulers for Mr. Aoki.

(30) What will Class Three display at the Town Picture Gallery in June?

1 Bags of compost made from dry leaves.

2 Photographs of wild birds on Maple Hill.

3 Twelve plant sketches and a guide to their watering chart.

4 Four wooden boxes filled with sunflower seeds.
