From: Mr. Shinohara, History Club Adviser
To: History Club Members
Subject: Tomorrow's castle-town walking tour

Hello everyone,
Thank you for preparing your short guide speeches for tomorrow's walking tour of the old castle-town district. Each member chose a fascinating spot to introduce!

According to this evening's weather forecast, light rain will begin around 11:00 a.m. tomorrow, though the early morning will be dry. Therefore, we will reverse the order of our schedule. Instead of visiting the Folk History Museum in the morning and walking outside in the afternoon, we will meet at East Gate Square at 8:45 a.m. and do the outdoor walking route first while the streets are dry. Then, at 11:15 a.m., we will eat an early lunch in the covered rest house beside the moat and spend the afternoon inside the museum.

Please bring a folding umbrella and put your speech notes inside a clear plastic folder so raindrops won't smudge the ink. See you at East Gate Square!

Mr. Shinohara

A Quiet Shelf for Nervous Dogs

Sixteen-year-old Noa volunteered every Saturday at the Oakwood Animal Shelter, cleaning kennels and refilling water bowls. Most rescued dogs wagged their tails happily whenever visitors walked down the aisle, hoping to be adopted. At the far end of the room, however, two shy dogs named Marble and Pip always hid behind their blankets because the echoing barks in the concrete room frightened them.

One evening at home, Noa noticed how her own dog calmed down immediately whenever her mother played soft classical guitar music in the living room. Curious, Noa read an article by a veterinary behavior specialist explaining that slow instrumental melodies and even gentle human reading voices could lower stress in shelter animals.

With permission from the shelter manager, Ms. Kato, Noa started a twenty-minute "Story Time" each Saturday morning before visiting hours opened. Sitting on a cushion outside the shy dogs' pens, Noa and two younger volunteers read nature picture books aloud in calm, steady voices while soft guitar music played at low volume.

During the first week, Marble only peeked out from under his blanket. By the third week, both Marble and Pip walked right up to the front gate and rested their chins on the floor, listening peacefully. When families arrived at noon, visitors could finally see the dogs' gentle personalities, and before the end of autumn, both Marble and Pip had found warm new homes.

(26) Why did Marble and Pip hide behind their blankets at the shelter?

1 They did not like drinking water from bowls.

2 Visitors brought loud musical instruments into the aisle.

3 They were cold because the heater was broken.

4 Loud barks echoing in the concrete room scared them.

(27) What gave Noa the idea to help the shy shelter dogs?

1 Finding an old picture book inside Marble's kennel.

2 Talking to a guitar shop owner near her high school.

3 Seeing her own dog relax at home when soft guitar music played.

4 Watching a movie about circus dogs jumping through hoops.

(28) What did Noa and the younger volunteers do on Saturday mornings?

1 They painted the concrete walls bright orange.

2 They taught the dogs to bark louder than the others.

3 They took Marble and Pip to a crowded shopping street.

4 They read books aloud in calm voices outside the pens with soft music.

(29) How did Marble and Pip behave by the third week of Story Time?

1 They came to the front gate and listened peacefully.

2 They fell asleep inside the manager's office.

3 They chewed up all the nature picture books.

4 They ran out of the shelter into the woods.

(30) What happened to Marble and Pip before autumn ended?

1 They became guard dogs at a local factory.

2 Both of them were adopted by new families.

3 They moved to another shelter far away.

4 Noa bought the shelter building herself.
