Returning Choir Sheet Music

From: Mei
To: Kaito
Subject: Folder for the chorus contest

Hi Kaito,
Great job playing the piano accompaniment at today's after-school rehearsal! Everyone in Class 2-C sang much more confidently thanks to your steady tempo.

When we tidied up the music room, I found your black sheet-music folder on top of the piano. Since it might rain tonight, I put it inside a clear plastic case in my backpack to keep the pages dry. I have morning basketball practice tomorrow, so I'll leave it on your homeroom desk at 7:50 a.m.!

See you tomorrow,
Mei

Returning Choir Sheet Music — Questions

(28) What role did Kaito play at today's rehearsal?

1 He played the piano accompaniment.

2 He conducted the school brass band.

3 He wrote a new school song.

4 He repaired the music room door.

(29) Where did Mei find Kaito's black folder?

1 On the basketball court.

2 On top of the piano in the music room.

3 At the bus stop in the rain.

4 Inside Kaito's locker.

(30) How will Kaito get his folder back tomorrow morning?

1 Mei will place it on his homeroom desk at 7:50 a.m.

2 He must pick it up at Mei's house tonight.

3 A music teacher will mail it next week.

4 Mei will give it to him after dinner.

Grandmother's Dried Persimmons

Every November, thirteen-year-old Haruto visited his grandmother's house in the mountains of Gifu. Hanging in neat orange rows under the wide wooden eaves were dozens of peeled persimmons tied to strings.

When Haruto was younger, he wondered why nobody ate those bright fruits right off the tree. This autumn, Grandmother let him help from the very beginning. First, she handed him a raw piece from an astringent persimmon. One tiny bite made Haruto's mouth pucker! "Tannins protect the fruit from birds," Grandmother laughed.

Together they peeled forty firm persimmons, dipped them briefly in boiling water to keep mold away, and hung them where crisp mountain breezes blew every afternoon. Three weeks later, Grandmother mailed a small wooden box to Haruto's home. Inside, the wrinkled fruits had turned ruby-brown and were dusted with natural white sugar.

Sharing them with his parents over green tea, Haruto was amazed that cold wind and patience could turn the most bitter fruit into winter's sweetest treat.

Grandmother's Dried Persimmons — Questions

(31) Where were the peeled persimmons hung?

1 Inside a dark basement.

2 Inside a warm oven in the kitchen.

3 On the branches of an apple tree.

4 Under the wide wooden eaves of Grandmother's house.

(32) What happened when Haruto tasted a raw piece of the persimmon?

1 It was frozen like ice cream.

2 It tasted sweeter than chocolate.

3 It was so astringent that his mouth puckered.

4 It had no taste at all.

(33) Why did they dip the peeled persimmons briefly in boiling water?

1 To paint them bright yellow.

2 To prevent mold from growing on them.

3 To cook persimmon soup for dinner.

4 To make the strings longer.

(34) When did Grandmother mail the finished dried persimmons to Haruto?

1 Before peeling them.

2 The very next morning.

3 Six months later in May.

4 Three weeks later.

(35) What was the white powder on the finished dried persimmons?

1 Natural sugar from the fruit.

2 Snow from the mountain roof.

3 Wheat flour from a bakery.

4 Salt from the kitchen.
