Starry Sky Observation Night

WEST HILL SCIENCE CENTER
Date: Friday, October 16 (6:30 p.m. – 8:30 p.m.)
Location: Rooftop Terrace (3rd Floor)

Look at Saturn and autumn stars through our large telescopes! Center staff will explain how to find major constellations in the night sky. Admission is free for junior high school students and 300 yen for adults.

Because the rooftop gets cold at night, please wear a warm jacket. Do not use flashlights or bright phone screens on the terrace, as strong light makes it hard to see faint stars. If the sky is cloudy, a 45-minute planetarium show will be held on the first floor instead.

(21) Why shouldn't visitors use flashlights on the rooftop terrace?

1 Batteries are sold only on the first floor.

2 Telescopes cannot work near warm jackets.

3 Flashlights might wake up neighbors near the center.

4 Strong light makes faint stars difficult to see.

(22) What will happen if the sky is cloudy on Friday night?

1 The center will close at 6:30 p.m. sharp.

2 Adults will have to pay 600 yen.

3 Staff will lend warm jackets to everyone.

4 Visitors will watch a planetarium show on the first floor.

From: Sara
To: Kaito
Subject: Saturday's pottery class

Hi Kaito,
Are you excited about the beginner pottery class at the craft studio this Saturday? My older brother took the same course last month, and he gave me some helpful advice yesterday. He said clay easily gets on your sleeves and shoes, so we should wear old sneakers and shirts with sleeves we can roll up.

The studio provides clay and shaping tools, but participants need to bring their own work aprons and a small towel. My brother lent me two thick canvas aprons, so you can use one of them if you don't have one at home!

Also, the bus to the craft studio runs only once every thirty minutes on Saturdays. Let's meet in front of the North Ticket Gate at 9:15 a.m. so we can catch the 9:25 a.m. bus comfortably. Tell me tonight if you'd like to borrow the extra apron!

Best,
Sara

A Voice Guide Made by Students

Last autumn, the History Folk House in Cedar Town celebrated its fiftieth birthday. Inside the wooden house, visitors can see traditional kitchen tools, lanterns, and weaving machines used a century ago. However, the director, Ms. Ono, noticed that junior high and elementary school visitors often walked through the rooms in five minutes because the printed explanations used difficult historical words.

Ms. Ono invited the broadcasting club at Cedar Junior High School to help solve this problem. Six club members visited the folk house after school on Wednesdays for a month. First, they interviewed elderly volunteers to learn surprising stories, such as how families kept food cool before electric refrigerators existed. Next, the students rewrote those explanations in clear, friendly sentences for young visitors.

Recording the voice guide took more effort than the students had expected. When they listened to their first recordings, they realized they were reading too fast. Their club adviser suggested pausing for two seconds after important words so listeners could look closely at each object while listening. The students recorded all ten tracks again.

In December, QR codes were placed beside ten exhibits so visitors could listen to the two-minute student stories on borrowed tablets. During the winter holidays, twice as many children completed the quiz sheet at the exit as the year before. Now the club members are preparing an English version of three popular tracks for international guests visiting Cedar Town in spring.
