Summer Planetarium Special Evening Show

WESTHILL SCIENCE DOME
Dates: Every Friday & Saturday in August (7:00 p.m. – 7:50 p.m.)
Tickets: 400 yen for adults / 150 yen for students

Enjoy a fifty-minute guided journey across the summer night sky! After the indoor dome projection ends at 7:50 p.m., visitors are invited up to the rooftop deck for twenty minutes to look at Saturn's rings through our large telescope at no additional charge.

Please note: Once the dome lights go out at 7:00 p.m., late visitors cannot enter because sudden light from the doorway ruins night vision. Also, if clouds cover the sky, the rooftop telescope viewing will be canceled, though the indoor show will run as scheduled.

(21) What can visitors do on the rooftop deck after the indoor show on clear nights?

1 Observe Saturn's rings through a large telescope for free.

2 Have dinner at a rooftop restaurant.

3 Buy small telescopes for 150 yen.

4 Watch a second fifty-minute movie outdoors.

(22) What happens if a visitor arrives after 7:00 p.m.?

1 They must pay double the ticket price.

2 They can enter quietly through the rooftop door.

3 They cannot go inside the dome once the lights are turned off.

4 They can ask the staff to restart the show.

From: Nanami
To: Sota
Subject: Colored vests for Grade 8 relay

Hi Sota,
Our physical education teacher, Mr. Kawai, asked our Field Day committee to check the numbered mesh vests ("pinnies") in the gym storage room today. When Reina and I counted them after school, we found plenty of red, yellow, and green vests for the eighth-grade class relay, but three of the blue vests had torn seams and missing numbers.

Luckily, the local youth soccer coach, who is Reina's uncle, said we may borrow a full set of ten clean blue vests for Field Day next Wednesday! Since you live right across the street from the community ground where his team practices on Sunday mornings, could you pick up the bag of blue vests from Coach Endo around 10:30 a.m. this Sunday?

After Field Day finishes on Wednesday, Reina and I will wash all ten vests at home and return them to her uncle, so you only need to bring the bag to school on Monday morning. Let me know if Sunday morning works!

Thanks,
Nanami

Saving the Old Clock on Station Square

For forty-five years, a tall brass clock stood in the center of Willowbrook Station Square. Commuters checked its round white face every morning, and friends simply said, "Meet me under the brass clock," whenever they went shopping downtown. Two winters ago, however, ice damaged the gears inside, and the hands stopped at twenty minutes past four.

Because parts for such an old clock were no longer sold in stores, the city office considered taking the clock down and putting up a plain digital screen instead. When students in the technical high school's metalwork club heard the news in the local paper, they asked the city if they could inspect the broken gears with their club adviser, Mr. Hori, who had repaired factory machines for thirty years.

Inside the clock tower, the students discovered that only two bronze gear wheels had cracked. Over six weeks after school, they measured the worn teeth down to a tenth of a millimeter, drew computer plans, and shaped two new bronze gears on the school lathe. On the day they tested the mechanism, they also polished the tarnished brass post until it shone in the sunlight.

When the clock chimed five o'clock again on the first Saturday of May, more than two hundred townspeople gathered in the square and applauded. Today, a small plaque at the base thanks the high school club for keeping the town's favorite meeting spot alive.

3C Saving the Old Clock on Station Square　設問 (26)〜(30)

(26) Why was the city office thinking about removing the brass clock?

1 Ice had broken its gears and replacement parts were no longer sold.

2 Nobody ever walked through Willowbrook Station Square.

3 Townspeople complained that its chimes were too loud at noon.

4 A new shopping mall wanted to buy the clock.

(27) Who helped the high school metalwork club examine the broken clock?

1 Their club adviser, Mr. Hori, who had long experience fixing machines.

2 A famous clockmaker invited from Switzerland.

3 Elementary school students living near the station.

4 The driver of the morning express train.

(28) How did the students solve the problem with the two cracked gears?

1 They glued the broken pieces together with plastic tape.

2 They ordered a digital screen from an online store.

3 They measured them carefully and made two new bronze gears at school.

4 They removed the minute hand so the clock used less power.

(29) What else did the students do on the day they tested the clock mechanism?

1 They painted the white clock face black.

2 They polished the brass post until it shone brightly.

3 They sold two hundred small watches in the square.

4 They moved the clock inside the high school gym.

(30) What can visitors see at the bottom of the brass clock today?

1 A small plaque thanking the high school club for their repair work.

2 A vending machine selling bronze key chains.
