From: Noah
To: Emi
Subject: Friday afternoon in the school kitchen

Hi Emi,
Thank you for joining our cooking team! As you know, community volunteers will gather early on Saturday morning to clean the pond in Central Park, and our class promised to prepare light lunch boxes for them.

We will meet in the school kitchen at 3:30 p.m. this Friday right after classes finish. I will bring fresh bread and sliced cheese from my uncle's bakery, and Hana is going to make warm carrot soup. Could you bring two clean dishcloths and a roll of aluminum foil? We need the foil to wrap the sandwiches neatly.

Also, we have to pack everything into cooler boxes before 5:00 p.m. because Mr. Takeda will lock the kitchen at 5:15 p.m. and store the boxes in the staff refrigerator overnight. Let me know if you can make it!

Best,
Noah

The Wooden Book Box at Lake Green Camp

Last summer, my town opened a small outdoor library at Lake Green Camp so families staying in tents could enjoy reading without carrying heavy books from home. Volunteers built a weatherproof wooden box with a small slanted roof and placed it beside the camp dining hall. Campers were welcome to leave books they had finished reading and borrow any book from the box during their stay.

When my family stayed at the camp in August, it rained heavily on our second afternoon, canceling our canoeing lesson. Feeling bored inside our tent, my friend Jo and I walked over to the dining hall and opened the wooden book box for the first time. Inside, we discovered an illustrated guide to wild lakeside birds left by a previous camper, along with a handwritten note on the first page recommending a quiet lookout point behind the boat house.

As soon as the rain stopped the next morning, Jo and I visited that lookout point with the guide in hand. Within half an hour, we spotted three kinds of waterbirds shown in the book and sketched their feathers in our notebooks. Before leaving the camp on Sunday, we returned the bird guide and added two mystery novels of our own.

However, several first-time campers told the camp staff that they had walked past the dining hall without realizing what the wooden box was for. This spring, Jo and I offered to paint a bright sign and draw a simple camp map showing the box's location. The staff gladly accepted our idea, and our map now hangs right at the camp entrance.

3C The Wooden Book Box at Lake Green Camp　設問 (26)〜(30)

(26) Why did the town set up the wooden book box at Lake Green Camp?

1 To let campers enjoy reading without bringing heavy books.

2 To collect old newspapers for recycling.

3 To sell new guidebooks to tourists.

4 To store canoeing equipment during rainy days.

(27) Why did the writer and Jo visit the book box on their second afternoon?

1 They were looking for a lost notebook near the dining hall.

2 Their canoeing lesson was canceled because of heavy rain.

3 The camp staff asked them to repair the slanted roof.

4 They needed to return two mystery novels immediately.

(28) How did the writer and Jo learn about the quiet lookout point?

1 Ms. Kato told them about it during breakfast.

2 They saw a large poster at the camp entrance.

3 They read a handwritten note inside the bird guide.

4 A forest ranger guided them behind the boat house.

(29) What problem did some first-time campers mention to the staff?

1 They did not realize what the wooden box near the dining hall was.

2 All the books inside the wooden box had gotten wet.

3 The lookout point behind the boat house was too noisy.

4 There were no books for children in the box.

(30) What did the writer and Jo make for the camp this spring?

1 A new wooden shelf for the boat house.

2 A bright sign and a map showing where the book box is.

3 An illustrated guide to three kinds of fish.

4 A set of raincoats for canoeing lessons.
