Preparing the Astronomy Observation Night

From: Mr. Takahashi, Science Club Advisor
To: Science Club Members
Subject: Friday's lunar eclipse observation

Hello everyone,
This Friday evening, a partial lunar eclipse will be visible from 7:15 p.m. to 8:45 p.m. As approved by the principal, our club will set up three telescopes on the school rooftop.

Please go home once after school to eat dinner and return to the west entrance with a parent's signed permission slip by 6:45 p.m. Even in May, the rooftop wind gets chilly after sunset, so bring a windbreaker or sweater.

Remember NOT to use white flashlights on the roof, because bright white light makes it hard for our eyes to see faint stars for twenty minutes. Wrap red cellophane over your small flashlight—we have extra red sheets in the science room if you need one.

See you Friday,
Mr. Takahashi

The Secondhand Textbook Shelf

When Airi entered ninth grade, her older cousin gave her two English workbooks and an atlas of historical maps that he no longer needed. Although a few margin notes were written neatly in pencil, the books were clean and helpful—especially the colored maps, which Airi used every evening at home while leaving her own heavy school atlas in her locker.

Airi wondered how many useful study guides and reference books were thrown away every March when ninth graders graduated. She talked with Ms. Honda, the teacher in charge of the student council, and proposed setting up a "Pass-It-On Study Shelf" inside the career guidance room during March.

Graduating students were invited to donate clean reference books, vocabulary cards, and geometry tool sets, along with a sticky note offering one piece of study advice to younger students. Over a hundred items were collected in just four days.

When seventh and eighth graders came to choose books in April, the sticky notes proved just as popular as the books themselves. Reading encouraging messages from seniors who had sat at the same desks gave younger students fresh motivation for the new term.

The Secondhand Textbook Shelf — Questions

(26) Why was the cousin's historical atlas especially convenient for Airi?

1 She could study with it at home while keeping her own heavy atlas at school.

2 It was smaller than a pocket dictionary.

3 It had all test answers for ninth grade inside.

4 A famous historian signed the cover.

(27) Where was the "Pass-It-On Study Shelf" set up?

1 At a local bookstore.

2 Inside the career guidance room.

3 In front of the train station.

4 Inside the gymnasium storage room.

(28) What did graduating students attach to the items they donated?

1 Money for buying new pencils.

2 Photos of their elementary schools.

3 A map of their high schools.

4 A sticky note with study advice for younger students.

(29) How many items were gathered in four days?

1 Over a hundred items.

2 About twenty items.

3 Just two books.

4 Five hundred desks.

(30) How did the sticky notes affect seventh and eighth graders in April?

1 They found the handwriting impossible to read.

2 They decided not to take any reference books.

3 They threw the sticky notes away immediately.

4 Messages from seniors gave them fresh motivation for the new term.
