Preparing for the Exchange Lunch

From: Mr. Clark, English Club Advisor
To: English Club Members
Subject: Friday's online chat with Harbor High in New Zealand

Hello everyone,
This Friday from 12:35 p.m. to 1:05 p.m., we will connect by video call with twelve students at Harbor High School in Auckland! Because New Zealand is three hours ahead of Japan, it will already be after school for them.

Each pair will have three minutes to introduce one favorite spot in our town. Instead of just reading a paper, hold up one clear photo or local object—like a festival fan or train postcard—close to the webcam so our guests can see it well.

Bring your lunch to Computer Room 2 at 12:15 p.m. so you can finish eating before the call starts!

Mr. Clark

(23) Why will it already be after school for the students in Auckland?

1 Their classes start at four in the morning.

2 Friday is a national holiday in New Zealand.

3 New Zealand is three hours ahead of Japan.

4 Auckland has no classes in spring.

(24) What does Mr. Clark suggest pairs do during their three-minute introduction?

1 Turn off the computer screen.

2 Read a ten-page essay without looking up.

3 Sing a song in French.

4 Hold up a clear photo or local object near the webcam.

(25) Why should members come to Computer Room 2 at 12:15 p.m.?

1 To cook lunch for Mr. Clark.

2 To repair twelve broken keyboards.

3 To finish eating lunch before the video call begins.

4 To take a thirty-minute math test.

The Hand-Drawn Evacuation Map

In September, fourteen-year-old Nanami's social studies class walked around their neighborhood to check disaster safety signs. Nanami's group visited the riverside block near the shopping street, where many elderly residents lived. Although a metal map at the station showed the route to Midori Elementary School—the local evacuation shelter—Nanami noticed a problem when she actually walked the route.

One narrow lane on the official map went down ten steep stone steps, making it impossible for wheelchairs or baby strollers to pass. Even worse, tall hedges hid a small wooden sign at the corner.

Nanami's group walked every side street for an hour and found a slightly longer but completely flat path past the post office. Back at school, they drew a large, colorful map with big letters, photos of landmarks like the red mailbox, and walking times measured at a slow pace.

When the neighborhood association laminated their map and posted it outside the supermarket, several older shoppers thanked the students for noticing what hurried commuters had missed.

The Hand-Drawn Evacuation Map — Questions

(26) What problem did Nanami's group find on the narrow lane shown on the station map?

1 It had ten steep stone steps that wheelchairs and strollers could not use.

2 The bridge over the river had been removed.

3 Midori Elementary School had moved to another city.

4 Cars drove at eighty kilometers per hour there.

(27) Where did the flat alternative route pass?

1 Through a dark train tunnel.

2 Past the post office.

3 Across a sandy beach.

4 Inside a hospital building.

(28) What helpful details did the students include on their hand-drawn map?

1 Names of every student in the school.

2 Train fares to Tokyo.

3 Restaurant lunch menus.

4 Large letters, landmark photos, and slow-pace walking times.

(29) Where did the neighborhood association put up the laminated map?

1 Outside the supermarket.

2 Inside the post office basement.

3 On top of the school roof.

4 Inside a moving bus.

(30) Why did older shoppers thank Nanami's group?

1 The students gave out free umbrellas.

2 The students carried everyone's groceries home.

3 The students built an elevator on the stone steps.

4 The students noticed practical barriers that busy commuters had overlooked.
