I also have two warm sleeping bags and a bright lantern. Do you need them? I will clean the tent this Saturday morning, so you can come to my house on Saturday afternoon. Bring a large backpack to carry the lantern and small tools.

Letters Across the Sea

Last autumn, Ms. Green's English class started a postcard exchange with a school in New Zealand. Each student got a partner. Hina's partner was a boy named Liam. In her first postcard, Hina wrote about her town's autumn festival and drew a small red lantern. However, she was worried that her English sentences were too short.

Three weeks later, postcards arrived from New Zealand. Liam loved Hina's drawing! He sent a postcard with a picture of sheep on a green hill. He wrote, "In New Zealand, October is spring, so baby lambs are everywhere now." Hina was surprised because the seasons were opposite.

For her second card, Hina wanted to share more. She went to the park, picked up two yellow ginkgo leaves, and taped one onto a card after pressing it flat in a thick dictionary. She wrote five sentences about how the trees changed color in November.

In December, Liam sent a photo of his class display board. Hina's yellow leaf was in the center, and many students wrote nice comments around it. Hina felt proud and decided to write longer letters next year.
