Helping at the Elementary School Festival

From: Mr. Hayashi, Volunteer Club Advisor
To: Volunteer Club Members
Subject: Saturday's game booth at Asahi Elementary School

Hello everyone,
Thank you for preparing the cardboard ring-toss game this week! Asahi Elementary School is looking forward to having our club run the booth at its autumn festival this Saturday.

Please meet at our junior high school gate at 8:20 a.m. We will carry the game boards together; it is only a ten-minute walk. Wear your school tracksuit and bring indoor shoes, because our booth is inside their gymnasium.

We will divide into two shifts so everyone also has thirty minutes to look around the festival and buy snacks if you wish. Remember to speak slowly and crouch down to eye level when explaining rules to first and second graders!

See you Saturday,
Mr. Hayashi

Helping at the Elementary School Festival — Questions

(23) Why do members need to bring indoor shoes?

1 It will snow heavily on Saturday.

2 Asahi Elementary School has no playground.

3 They will run a race in the hallway.

4 Their game booth will be inside the elementary school gym.

(24) Why will the club members work in two shifts?

1 So everyone has time to walk around the festival.

2 Half of the members must go home at nine.

3 The gym is too small for more than two people.

4 They have two different schools to visit.

(25) What advice does Mr. Hayashi give for talking to young children?

1 Use difficult English words.

2 Stand on a chair so everyone can see.

3 Give out ten rings at once.

4 Speak slowly and lower yourself to their eye level.

Repairing the Town Bench

Along the path between Kaede Station and the library stood an old wooden bench under a cherry tree. For years, shoppers rested their heavy bags there, and students waited on it for friends. Last spring, however, two of the seat boards cracked, and the city put yellow tape around the bench with a small "Do Not Sit" sign.

Weeks passed, and Hana noticed an elderly man standing tiredly beside the taped bench with his groceries. At dinner, Hana mentioned this to her father, who worked at a lumber shop. "Replacing two cedar boards doesn't take much material," her father said, "but someone has to ask the city park office properly."

The next day, Hana and her friend Shun visited the park office after school. A staff member explained that dozens of park repairs were waiting after winter storms, so minor benches came last. When Hana shared that her father's shop could donate seasoned cedar boards if city workers checked the safety, the office manager's eyes lit up.

Two Saturdays later, a city carpenter came with tools, and Hana and Shun helped sand and oil the new boards. Once the bench reopened, someone left a small bouquet of daisies tied to the armrest with a "Thank you" tag.

Repairing the Town Bench — Questions

(26) Why was yellow tape put around the bench last spring?

1 The cherry tree was being cut down.

2 Two boards on the seat had cracked.

3 Wet paint was drying on the armrest.

4 A movie was being filmed on the path.

(27) What made Hana decide to talk about the bench at dinner?

1 She wanted wood for her school art class.

2 She hurt her knee on the path.

3 She saw a tired elderly man standing beside it with groceries.

4 The library asked her to write a report.

(28) Why hadn't the city repaired the bench yet?

1 Workers were busy with many repairs after winter storms.

2 Nobody knew where Kaede Station was.

3 Cedar wood could not be used outdoors.

4 The park office planned to build a parking lot there.

(29) How did Hana's family and the city work together?

1 The city paid Hana's school a thousand dollars.

2 Hana's father's shop donated boards and a city carpenter installed them.

3 Hana's father built a brand-new library.

4 Shun fixed the bench alone at night.

(30) What did someone leave on the bench after it reopened?

1 A small bouquet of daisies with a thank-you tag.

2 A yellow warning sign.

3 A bag of groceries.

4 A pair of carpenter's gloves.
