welcoming Our Sister-School Guests

From: Student Council President, Kenta Mori
To: Volunteer Host Guides
Subject: Plan for Australian students' visit on Thursday

Hi everyone,
Thank you for volunteering to guide the sixteen students visiting from Melbourne this Thursday! They will arrive by charter bus at 9:20 a.m. and stay until 3:10 p.m.

In the morning, each pair of guides will take two guests to third-period calligraphy class and fourth-period P.E. At lunchtime, we will eat together in the multipurpose hall. Four of our guests are vegetarian, so our cafeteria staff prepared special vegetable tempura udon with green stickers on the trays—please help your guests pick up the right trays.

If you don't catch an English word right away, don't panic! Keep a small notepad and pen in your pocket; drawing a quick sketch or writing down a key word works wonders.

Best,
Kenta

3 An electronic speaker.

4 Extra tempura tickets.

Learning Braille on Everyday Boxes

One rainy Saturday, fifteen-year-old Mei went to a convenience store to buy shampoo for her family. At home in the bathroom, her mother pointed to a row of tiny raised lines on the side of the shampoo bottle, while the conditioner bottle next to it was smooth. "Do you know why only the shampoo has those bumps?" her mother asked. "So people can tell them apart with their eyes closed—and it helps people with visual impairments, too."

Once Mei noticed that design, she began spotting raised dots—Braille—all around town: on elevator buttons, station handrails, canned drinks, and town office maps. Curious to understand what the dots actually spelled, she borrowed a beginner's Braille chart from the city library.

At first, reading with her fingertips felt impossible; all the dots seemed to blur together. After two weeks of practicing ten minutes each night, however, she could read floor numbers and "push/pull" door signs.

During her school's welfare study week, Mei brought empty household bottles and station photos to class. Letting classmates close their eyes and touch the bottles helped everyone realize how thoughtful small designs make daily life easier for all.

Learning Braille on Everyday Boxes — Questions

(26) What difference did Mei's mother point out in the bathroom?

1 The shampoo bottle was twice as tall as the conditioner bottle.

2 Both bottles were written in French.

3 Only the shampoo bottle had tiny raised lines on its side.

4 The conditioner bottle was made of glass.

(27) Why did Mei borrow a beginner's Braille chart from the library?

1 To write a secret letter to her cousin.

2 To repair a broken elevator button.

3 To pass a convenience store job interview.

4 To understand what the raised dots around town actually spelled.

(28) How did Mei become able to read simple Braille signs?

1 She understood everything on the very first try.

2 She practiced for ten minutes every night for two weeks.

3 She used a special camera phone app.

4 Her brother read every sign aloud for her.

(29) What did Mei bring to class during welfare study week?

1 Cans of hot soup for lunch.

2 A guide dog from a training center.

3 Empty household bottles and photos of station signs.

4 Twenty library books.

(30) What did Mei's classmates learn through touching the bottles with their eyes closed?

1 Shampoo should be kept in the kitchen.

2 Thoughtful small designs make everyday life easier for everyone.

3 Plastic bottles are too slippery to hold.

4 Braille is used only inside hospitals.
