Preparing for Grandma's Birthday

From: Kaho
To: Uncle Dan
Subject: Grandma's birthday dinner

Dear Uncle Dan,
Everyone in our house is excited about Grandma's seventieth birthday party this Sunday! Mom reserved a quiet room at Olive Restaurant near South Station for 5:30 p.m. Because parking near the station is expensive, Dad thinks taking the train will be easier for you.

My brother Shun and I are making a photo album of our family trips. Do you have any old photos of Grandma from when you and Mom were children? If you bring two or three photos on Sunday, we can put them on the first page.

Also, please don't tell Grandma about the album yet—we want it to be a surprise! Call our house if you need directions from the station.

Love,
Kaho

A Rainy Day at the Pottery Studio

Last month, Toma went on a family trip to a mountain village famous for handmade pottery. On Saturday morning, they planned to hike to a waterfall. However, heavy rain started right after breakfast, so Toma felt disappointed inside the hotel lobby.

The hotel manager smiled and told Toma's parents about a small pottery studio five minutes away. "Visitors can make their own cups or bowls there, even without reservations," she said. Toma had never touched potter's clay before, so he became curious and agreed to try.

At the studio, a potter named Mr. Hori showed Toma how to shape wet clay on a spinning wheel. At first, Toma pressed too hard with his fingers, and the clay bent to one side. Mr. Hori gently helped him fix the shape and taught him to keep his hands steady. After thirty minutes, Toma finished making a round soup bowl for his mother.

Because the clay needed to dry and be baked in a hot kiln, Toma could not take the bowl home that day. Three weeks later, a cardboard box arrived at Toma's house. Inside was his shiny green soup bowl! His mother used it for dinner that evening, and Toma decided to visit the studio again next summer to make a plate for his father.
